ABOUT LISA

Lisa Nehring is a sought-after voice for homeschooling families navigating the middle and high school years. As founder of True North Academy — a fully Cognia-accredited online school serving homeschooling families — she has spent three decades helping parents design an education rooted in purpose, anchored in academic rigor, and aimed True North.

Lisa's Master's thesis on Why Parents Homeschool informs every session: she brings the warmth of a fellow parent and the depth of a career educator, speaking to the questions families actually have — about transcripts, college, careers that don't exist yet, and raising children prepared for the future. She also leads It's Not That Hard to Homeschool, where she podcasts, reviews curriculum, and offers parents the community and confidence they need to lead their families well.

SIGNATURE TALKS

Design the Education & Life Your Teen Deserves

Lisa's signature session. Parents leave with two transformational tools — the Student Learning Profile and the Personalized Learning Plan — and a custom roadmap to design an education that fits their teen, not the system.

The Future of Work: Careers That Don't Exist Yet

A clear-eyed look at AI, automation, and the 4th Industrial Revolution — and the skills, mindset, and strategies families need now to raise children ready for a world that's still being written.

The College Dilemma: Rising Costs & Better Paths Forward

Tuition is up, options have narrowed, and the traditional college path is fracturing. Lisa walks parents through flexible, affordable, academically rigorous alternatives — including dual-degree pathways.

Credits, Transcripts & Tests — Demystified

Practical tools for tracking high school credits, building transcripts colleges respond to, and navigating standardized testing with clarity. The session high school parents wish they'd had in 9th grade.
